Blake Snell's performance fueled by meek contact off unforgettable sports names. Early Wednesday afternoon at the brink of being seismically altered.

A Achilles National League Playoffs that stretch between the Padres and the Phillies in the opening round of the Division Series has been swinging seemingly adrift early Wednesday afternoon at Petco Park, it seemed on the verge of missing one of these possible unforgettable sports names. The hitting stance of the Padres' 2012 NLCS clincher against the Phillies has been a force in its own right, with some of the league's best hitters finding holes all over the field after the fourth game of the series, while just two made it to the fifth game. The Padres' approach, led by manager Dave Roberts, has been a constant theme throughout the series, with the Padres looking for every opportunity to free the Padres' bats from the current slump.

The Padres have scored back-to-back in a 3-0 NLCS loss to the Phillies in Philadelphia on Friday in Philadelphia to extend and score the fifth run of the game. Going the importance of the fifth run extended from critical to definite to obvious.

"We've been doing this," said Padres manager Ron Gant's son.

Starting a seven-game postseason matchup taking place at home in the place where World Series games are played, the Padres have taken the lead in the NLCS sweep after the fifth game, setting the tone for the rest of the series.

In the 2-1 NLCS Game 3, Padres shortstop Victor Caratini hit a two-run home run in the fifth inning, sparking the Padres to victory.

Game 6.

What came after the second score, when the Padres had two men on base, is still sounds familiar — changed the entire complexion and trajectory of the NLCS. If the Padres don't win the next two games, it could become the monumental turn in the series.

"It shows you how good a team can be," said Juan Soto, who drove in the run.

San Diego is a turnaround story, finding that type of answer when it counts.

Another key moment in the Padres' NLCS journey is a missed opportunity in the ninth inning of Game 5, when the Padres had the bases loaded with one out. The Padres came up empty on a called strikeout, ending the inning and the game.

PARKING TICKET FEES MAY INCREASE

BY DAVID GARRICK

Proposed to forward to City Council is part of push to boost revenue

The cost of a citation from $32 to $40 will be considered.

OCEANSIDE

San Diego residents for years have paid $32 for a street-sweeping parking ticket.

“Many people support this proposal,” said Mayor Steve Todd. “It will help to boost revenue.”

A San Diego City Council subcommittee has recommended raising the cost of a ticket to $40 as part of a proposed move to increase parking ticket fines.

The increase would move San Diego from being third to fourth in local parking fines. The increase was approved by the subcommittee over the top proposed by Mayor Todd.

“Any organization that deals with the public,” said Todd, “should be able to generate enough revenue to support their operations.”

During a meeting last week, the San Diego Council recommended raising the parking ticket fines by 25 percent.

The council was also considering raising the fines for parking in a no-parking zone or failing to pay a parking ticket.

“Many people support this proposal,” said Mayor Todd. “It will help to boost revenue.”
